Martin Ready To Start GOP Revision Plans

NEW SPEAKER OF HOUSE DUE IN CAPITAL SUNDAY

Stripping Wartime Powers From President Tops List Of GOP Plans

BY DEAN W. DITTMER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Mass., who will be speaker of the new house, arrives in town tomorrow to prepare Republican strategy for ending presidential war powers, cutting taxes and slashing what he calls "wasteful" government spending.

Martin, house minority leader during the long years of Democratic control, has called a Republican steering committee meeting for next Thursday and a meeting of all GOP house members-elect for Dec. 2.

Rep. Charles A. Halleck, R., Ind., who is reported to be a sure bet for the house majority leadership, and Rep. Thomas Jenkins, R., O., who will be contender for the post, are already in the capital.

House Republican whip Leslie C. Arends, Ill., arrived last night and Rep. Clarence J. Brown, R., O., another aspirant for the Republican leadership job, will arrive early in the week.

The Republicans face the sizable task of completing their legislative and organizational planning by Jan. 3, when the new congress convenes.

Tax Cuts Due

Foremost on Martin's agenda is a legislative program that will strip President Truman of his war powers and cut administration spending and taxes. Some Republicans are talking of a tax cut of as much as 20 per cent.

GOP leaders also will consider proposals for new labor and agricultural legislation and demands for congressional investigation of administration activities.

In addition, the GOP must decide on its leadership and committee chairmen, and prepare to reorganize the legislative personnel. This means that hundreds of capitol employees hired by the Democrats—some as far back as December, 1931—will be fired and replaced by Republicans.

Taft May Be Leader

It appears that Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O., will be the senate majority leader while Halleck's supporters claim he is certain to be the house leader.

Committee chairmen will be named by seniority. How many there will be is uncertain. This depends on whether congress accepts the "streamlining" bill as passed last year which would cut congressional committees to less than half their present number.

Three Republican senators—Joseph H. Ball, of Minnesota, Owen Brewster, of Maine, and Guy Cordon, of Oregon—voiced confidence meanwhile that senate committees would be streamlined as scheduled.

Big Plums Up

Major political plum jobs the Republican leaders must decide on are the senate and house sergeant-at-arms, senate secretary, house clerk, senate and house post.

54 VETERANS TO 'SIT TIGHT' IN SQUATTER HOMES

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Fifty-four veteran "squatters" who moved their families into a housing project without authority decided to "sit it out" today despite the arrest of five of their number on charges of trespassing.

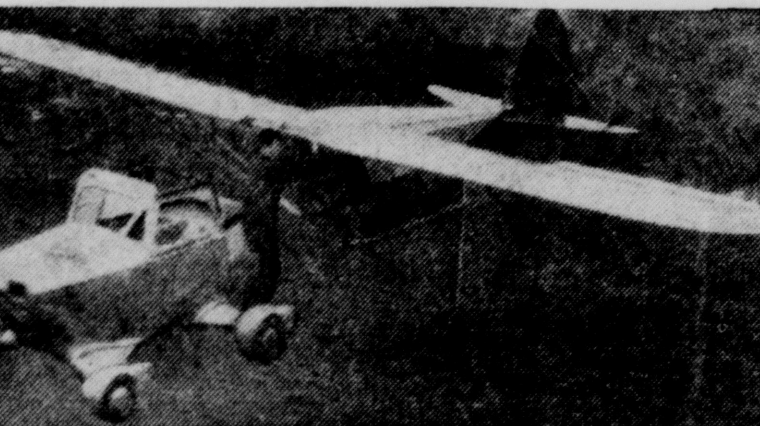

The five were arrested and released last night after signing individual bonds. The Chicago housing authority, which administers the housing project occupied by the veterans, had demanded warrants for all 54.

But Judge Edward S. Scheffler, a veteran of World War I, refused. Instead he issued six warrants and said the arrests would serve as a test case to determine the status of the other veterans. Warrants were served, however, on only five veterans.

AUTO-AIRPLANE DRIVES OR FLIES

"Airphibian" takes off on first test flight at Danbury, Conn.

Inventor Fulton converts plane to car in a mere seven minutes.

Minus a few parts, car is ready to travel down highway at 45 MPH.

FIRST PUBLIC TEST at Danbury, Conn., of an auto-airplane developed by Robert Edison Fulton, Jr., president of Continental, Inc., is shown in these pictures. It takes one person seven minutes to convert vehicle from plane to car by removing propeller and fuselage, cranking down wing wheels and tail wheel, and disconnecting three levers in cockpit. The aluminum-bodied aircraft is a single engine monoplane with cruising speed of approximately 125 miles an hour. As an automobile it has four wheels, a convertible top and a speed of 45 miles an hour. Fulton hopes to manufacture auto-planes and sell them for between $4,500 and $5,000.

Republicans Dominate Ohio's 97th Assembly

By TED S. ALEXANDER
United Press Staff Correspondent

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—An overwhelmingly Republican 97th Ohio General assembly will greet GOP Governor-Elect Thomas J. Herbert when he is inaugurated next year.

The assembly, with only 16 Democratic members out of a total of 175, will meet on Jan. 6, one week before the new governor-elect and other state officials are sworn into office.

Present party lineup in the state legislature is:
Senate — 32 Republicans, four Democrats.
House — 125 Republicans, 14 Democrats.

If the assembly leaders—who have in the past demonstrated that they have minds of their own regarding legislation—choose to work with the Republican governor from Cleveland, Herbert should have no trouble in obtaining even emergency legislation.

In the retiring legislature, the Republican majority was not as large and the two-thirds approval of emergency acts required a coalition of Democrats and Republicans.

The party strength in the 1945-46 legislature was 20 Republicans and 13 Democratic senators, and 89 Republicans to 47 Democratic representatives.

Both houses of the state legislature are certain to have new faces as well as new presiding officers. In the senate, Lt. Gov. Paul Herbert is sworn in.

Government Studying Return Of Coal Mines To Private Owners

By United Press

Strikes were threatened today which would tie up New York's subway trains and put popular radio shows and big-name stars off the air.

In other labor developments:

1. The government sounded out private owners of the government-operated coal mines to see if they would be willing to resume negotiations with the miners.

2. A wage dispute at Rochester, N. Y., forced the city's only morning newspaper, the Democrat and Chronicle, to suspend publication.

3. Attempts to settle the 40-day shipping strike on the west coast were stalemated pending the arrival of a federal conciliator.

Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York planned to cut short his California vacation to return to New York Monday for negotiations in the threatened subway strike. The CIO transport workers union threatened to take a strike vote for all 54.

But Judge Edward S. Scheffler, a veteran of World War I, refused. Instead he issued six warrants and said the arrests would serve as a test case to determine the status of the other veterans. Warrants were served, however, on only five veterans.

KINGSLEY TAFT IS HOPING FOR SPECIAL MEET

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Kingsley A. Taft, the very short-term senator-elect from Ohio, is rooting for a special session of congress.

If President Truman doesn't call one before Jan. 3, Taft, a Republican, will have nothing at all to tell his grandchildren about life in the senate. His term expires when the new congress convenes. Regardless of whether he ever is sworn in, Taft has set up an office in the senate office building and already is hard at work.

Taft, 43-year-old fifth cousin of Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O., thinks there is a good chance a special session will be called "if the President wants to get his appointments through."

BURGLARS' HAUL AT LEGION HOME MAY BE $5,000

Slot Machines And Cash Box Yield Large Amounts Of Currency And Coins

Thieves who burglarized the American Legion club, 136 East Main street, early Saturday, obtained loot unofficially reported at between $4,000 and $5,000 in currency and coins.

The money was stolen from a cash box which had been concealed in a small closet-like room off the second floor bar and club rooms, and from several slot machines.

Entrance to the two-story brick structure was gained by opening an unlocked first-floor window on the east side of the building.

The burglary was discovered when the bar and club rooms were opened Saturday. The place had been closed at midnight Friday and, as is the custom, the lights in the bar and club rooms had been left burning.

Police were notified and Chief William F. McCrady immediately launched an investigation.

Edward C. Ebert, adjutant of the Legion post, said the club rooms had been burglarized, that entrance was gained via a first-floor window, that the amount of the loot had been undetermined and could not be estimated by Legion officials, and that arrival of a fingerprint expert was being awaited.

Beyond these assertions Adjutant Ebert declined to discuss the robbery.

However, from unofficial sources it was learned that the currency and coins taken from the cash box and from the slot machines totaled $4,000 to $5,000, that several of the slot machines were opened with keys and the coins removed, and that two slot machines were smashed open with some heavy implement.

It was also learned, unofficially, that a fingerprint expert was summoned from Columbus to assist in the police investigation of the burglary.

The keys used to open several slot machines, it was unofficially learned, were obtained by the thieves from a hiding place in the clubrooms.

CHINA FIGHTING RAGING AGAIN

Nationalists And Communists Battle Despite Chiang's Cease-Fire Order

NANKING, Nov. 9.—China's Communists, although assured by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek that a cease-fire order in the civil war effective Monday, engaged in heavy fighting today on several fronts.

The army organ Peace Daily reported from Peiping that the Communists were evacuating vital supplies from Barbin to Kaimutze, near the Siberian border, leaving 40,000 well-equipped troops to garrison the city.

It said tens of thousands of Communists were mustered in the Dairen area awaiting transportation to beleaguered Chefoo on the Shantung peninsula, a further indication that the Reds were evacuating some key points in Manchuria and still carrying the fight to Chiang's armies.

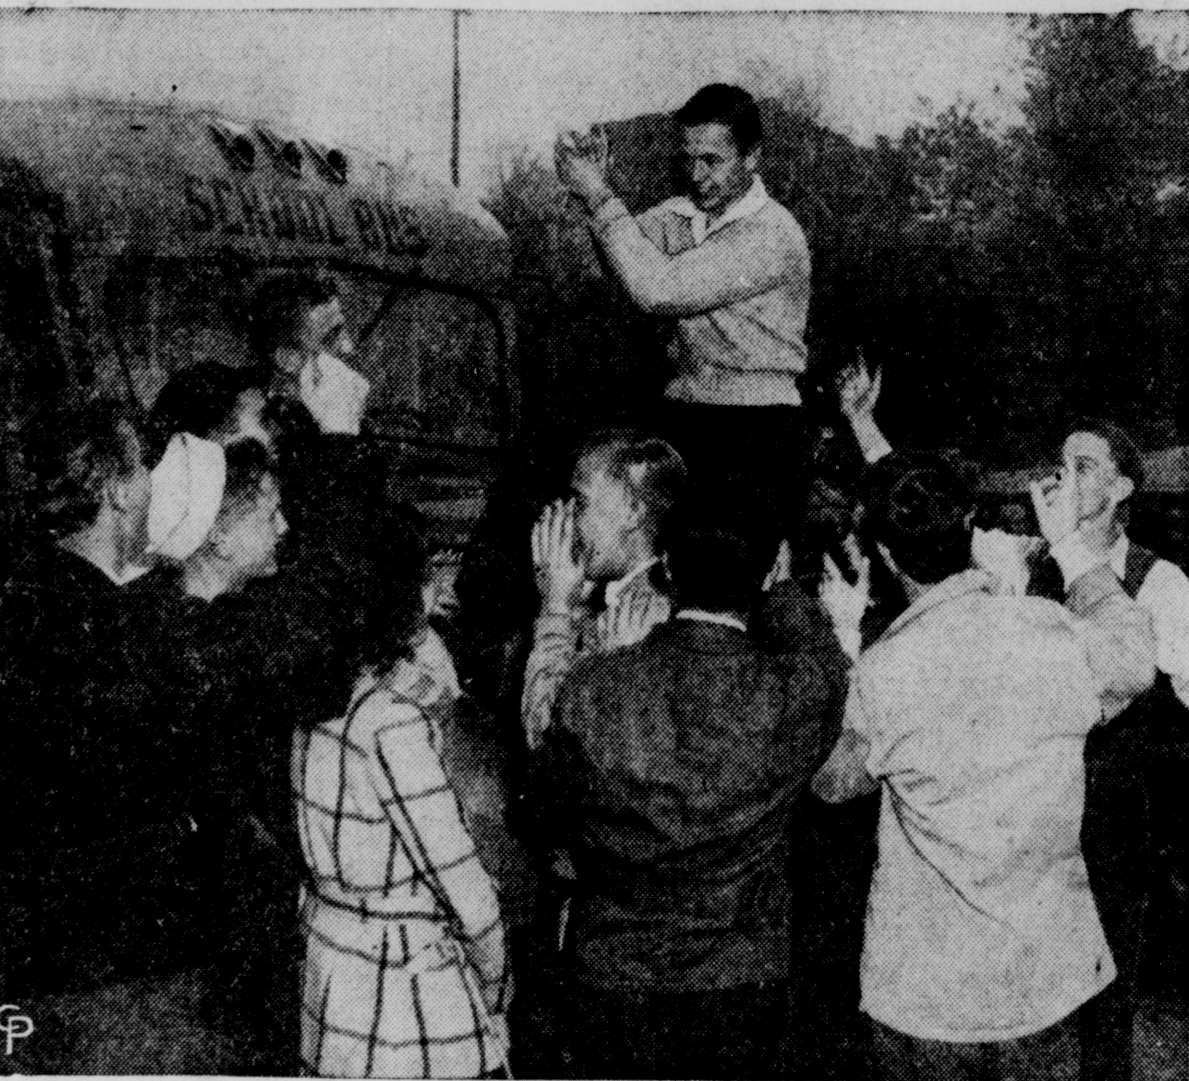

The Communists were reported counterattacking at Yehsien, in Shantung province 78 miles north-west of the U. S. naval anchorage at Tsingtao. Other Red troops in the North and South of Shantung province were said to have reached the area south of Weihsein in

Permanent Home, Franco UN Assembly Topics

UNITED NATIONS HALL, FLUSHING, N. Y., Nov. 9.—The United Nations general assembly meets in plenary session today to discuss the search for a permanent home and take another step toward a showdown on Franco Spain.

The diplomats left their committee rooms for the first plenary session in eight days. The action on Spain was expected to be a minor move toward a major fight. Fireworks were anticipated in discussion of the permanent home question.

The steering committee recommended that today's agenda include an American proposal that search for permanent headquarters be extended to San Francisco and parts of greater New York in addition to committee approved Westchester county.

Bylo-Russian foreign minister, Kuzma Kiselev planned to demand that Geneva, Switzerland, also be considered, although his proposal has not yet been approved by the steering committee.

The last technical obstacle to assembly action against Generalissimo Francisco Franco was to be erased by Secretary-General Trygve Lie's report that the security council had moved the matter off its agenda. This permits the assembly to do something besides talk about Franco if two-thirds of the 51 United Nations want to.

Another argument-filled matter on the assembly agenda remained in committee at Lake Success. There the social, humanitarian and cultural committee resumed its controversy over the proposed international refugee organization—a matter which has aroused deep disagreement between Russia and the western powers.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, American member of the committee, laid bare some of the refugee issues yesterday when she accused Russia of refusing to cooperate and declared sternly that the United States never would agree to repatriate any of Europe's 1,000,000 refugees against their will.

BYRNES TO ASK LESS WAR TALK

'Atom-Brandishing' Proving Embarrassing To U. S. State Department

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes may soon ask President Truman to ban "atom-brandishing" by U. S. military and naval leaders, sources close to Byrnes said today.

These sources said recent statements by leading air force and Navy spokesmen were "seriously embarrassing" Byrnes in his efforts to forge world peace.

Byrnes was represented as being particularly upset over remarks such as that of Adm. William F. Halsey that the Navy will go "anywhere it pleases" and the more recent air forces announcement that its B-36 bomber could "carry an atomic bomb to any inhabited region of the world."

Meanwhile, Col. Clarence S. Irvine, pilot of the Pacusan Dreamboat, hastened to deny that he thought a global flight of B-29s by way of Russia would help American diplomacy as newspaper reporters interpreted his remarks yesterday at Miami.

GERMANY TAKES BYRNES STUDY

Foreign Ministers End Week Of Total Failure To Agree On Treaties

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes turned his attention to the German problem today after the big four council of foreign ministers marked off another week of total failure to agree on peace treaties for Hitler's satellites.

The big four took a long weekend recess, partly to enable Byrnes to attend the Army-Notre Dame football game this afternoon.

But Byrnes also is preparing to receive high American officials from Germany to start British-American negotiations on merger of those two zones in Germany and also to prepare for the big four talks on a German peace treaty late this month.

The American officials from Germany are headed by Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, deputy military governor, and Ambassador Robert Murphy, political advisor to Clay and the American occupation forces in Germany. They will be accompanied by political, financial, industrial, agricultural, foreign trade and economic experts.

The British-American talks will take place in Washington, but at least Clay and Murphy will confer with Byrnes here either upon their arrival this weekend or early next week.

Meanwhile, the prospects for early peace treaties for Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland appeared as far away as ever. A week of big four meetings—more than 16 hours of talk—and the foreign ministers were just as far away from agreement as they were early last Summer.

Pink Slip Parade Starts With 600 Dismissals; Offices To Close

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Price Administrator Paul A. Porter and other top officials are expected to resign in the wake of the government's forthcoming decontrol order, informed sources said today.

The decontrol announcement also will bring the wholesale discharge of OPA employees, they said.

The White House is expected to announce about the first of the week the end of all price controls except those on rent, sugar, rice, syrup and molasses. Wage controls probably will be swept away at the same time.

In addition to Porter, those expected to resign after the order is put out are John D. Small, civilian production administrator, and the three members of the price decontrol board—Roy L. Thompson, Daniel W. Bell, and George H. Mead.

About 9,500 OPA field employees will be given their pink slips on Tuesday. OPA gave notice to 600 employees yesterday. An additional 10,000 will get the walking papers when the 61 district OPA offices close soon.

13,000 To Stay

Burke Fry, chairman of OPA's new liquidation committee, told reporters about 13,000 employees will be kept to administer rent and sugar controls and to liquidate the agency.

Fry and Deputy Administrator Max McCullough outlined plans for closing OPA district offices and other liquidation problems to the eight regional OPA administrators meeting here today. A few employees are expected to be retained in various cities throughout the country to handle the sugar rationing program. The eight regional offices and the hundreds of area rent offices are also expected to continue operating for the time being at least.

Porter Official Denied of Porter's resignation, those close to him said his services would not be needed to run the rent and sugar rationing programs. It is expected that if Porter resigns, he will be reappointed chairman of the federal communications commission, where his vacancy never has been filled.

PASTOR REPORTS UNDERWORLD IS MAKING THREATS

STEUBENVILLE, O., Nov. 9.—One of the fighting pastors leading the campaign against crime in this Ohio river city has received a telephone call from an anonymous underworld figure threatening the ministers and their families unless they "laid off" the fight.

The Rev. Norman Nygaard said today that he received the call about 2:30 a. m. from a person calling himself a member of the "torpedo squad." The anonymous callers said "if you . . . preachers know what's good for you and your families you'd better lay off before it's too late."

The 12 ministers, fighting back quickly, issued a joint answer in which they said "as far as we are concerned, we've known from the start that someone might get one of us, but if they do we won't stop until every hoodlum and racketeer has been brought to jail."

The ministers also sent a petition to Governor Frank Lausche asking for a special prosecutor and a special grand jury to investigate vice conditions here.

Small frequently has expressed a desire to return to private industry, and the three-man decontrol board will have nothing left to do with price controls swept away.

Source In Doubt A spokesman for Reconversion Director John R. Steelman said a final decision had not been made as to whether the decontrol announcement would come from the President or Steelman's office. There were reports it would be made by the President at a press conference on Tuesday.

A decision already has been made to scrap controls over building materials, informants said, despite the objections of housing expediter Wilson W. Wyatt.

Thus it appeared that controls will be removed on building materials, clothing, furniture, basic metals, coal, major consumer durable such as automobiles and washing machines, and on steel and steel products.

OPA hopes the announcement would be made shortly because many industries are holding up their products awaiting the end of controls. Landlords, knowing that rent controls will remain but be relaxed somewhat, have "flooded" the rent division with applications for higher rents, an OPA official said.

She chided Russia for calling refugees fascists because they refused to return to their now Soviet-dominated homelands. "As Mr. Vishinsky uses it, it would seem that democracy is synonymous with Soviet, or at least a fairly similar, conception of political and economic questions," she said.

As for the Franco case Lie's report at today's plenary meeting pushed the American and British delegation closer to a new test of their old refusal to support more than verbal action against Franco.

In the face of a tacitly-led Russian move for a universal rupture of diplomatic relations—a move which has the support of many countries from the Soviet orbit—the Anglo-Americans faced the necessity of eking out at least 18 votes to avoid a fast-growing demand for a universal break in diplomatic relations with Spain. Each united nation has one vote in the assembly and any important matter requires a two-thirds majority, 34 votes, to pass.

Poland has growing support for her formal resolution calling for a diplomatic isolation of Franco. Byelo-Russia wants the break extended to commerce and communications.

After two and a half-weeks of plenary meetings and committee sessions, other major issues confronting the assembly were bedded down in tension and suspense.

Sen. Joseph H. Ball, R., Minn., said he thought the GOP might sponsor legislation limiting presidential tenure to two four-year terms.

In the lower house, a successor to speaker Jackson Betts, R., Findlay, must be chosen. Betts also did not seek re-election.

Rep. Robert Shaw, R., Franklin, was returned to the house in last Tuesday's election. Shaw was majority house floor leader in the 96th general assembly and is likely to be named to that post again.

A minority house leader must also be named. During the closing days of the 96th assembly this post was held by John Carney, D., Cleveland.

Republican leaders have expressed concern that the heavy GOP representation in both houses must be held together by strong leadership or might resolve into a number of blocks.

With the post-war program commission created by the last legislature ready to report when the new assembly meets, a heavy schedule has been anticipated for early next year.

BURGLARS' HAUL AT LEGION HOME MAY BE $5,000

(Continued from Page One) damage was done to furniture and furnishings in the Legion club and at that time it was reported that the damage was the work of a man who had become intoxicated within the place and who was permitted to remain there after the closing hour.

So far as learned no liquor or cigarettes were stolen in the Saturday burglary. Thieves who looted the clubrooms of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at 217 North Court street, the night of Oct. 11 have never been apprehended. A police report said that in that burglary $200 in coins, $8 in pennies in rolls, and 18 cartons of cigarettes were stolen. Entrance was gained by forcing a first-floor window. The intruders then smashed a locked door to gain access to the basement bar and club rooms where they stole the cigarettes, money, and a quantity of liquor. Apparently wielding sledge hammers the thieves literally wrecked slot machines and removed the coin contents.

BYRNES TO ASK LESS WAR TALK

Irvine said "the quotations in the news story in question consist of a number of personal ideas and rumors not expressed by me and put together by a reporter." He added that "the news story had not been read by me prior to release."

Spaatz ordered an immediate investigation of Irvine's purported claim to have been invited to the White House to discuss a B 29 flight with President Truman, Spaatz and assistant secretary of war for air W. Stuart Symington. He said Irvine's only visit to the White House was to be congratulated for the Dreamboat's Hawaii-Cairo flight.

An opposite view was expressed by Democratic Sen. Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma. Thomas told reporters today that the Democrats will bounce back and recapture the senate in 1948 "and there's a chance to take the presidency as well." He did not predict which party would win house control.

PORTER READY TO RESIGN AS CONTROLS END

Decontrol Order, Expected First Of Week, To Bring Many Capital Changes

price decontrol board and for Small said they would be ready to step out as soon as the decontrol order is announced. Small frequently has expressed a desire to return to private industry, and the three-man decontrol board will have nothing left to do with price controls swept away.

Source In Doubt

A spokesman for Reconversion Director John R. Steelman said a final decision had not been made as to whether the decontrol announcement would come from the President or Steelman's office. There were reports it would be made by the President at a press conference on Tuesday.

A decision already has been made to scrap controls over building materials, informants said, despite the objections of housing expediter Wilson W. Wyatt.

Thus it appeared that controls will be removed on building materials, clothing, furniture, basic metals, coal, major consumer durable such as automobiles and washing machines, and on steel and steel products.

OPA hopes the announcement would be made shortly because many industries are holding up their products awaiting the end of controls. Landlords, knowing that rent controls will remain but be relaxed somewhat, have "flooded" the rent division with applications for higher rents, an OPA official said.

an effort to join their comrades in eastern Shantung and keep a supply corridor open to Chefoo, their chief port in the province.

Although the generalissimo's cease-fire order of the day said that effective Monday Nationalist troops would engage in no fighting except to defend positions now held, the Nationalists were carrying the attack heavily to the Reds around Chefoo, with combat reported at Chefoo itself, at Tsimo, Kaomi, Chiao-shien and Yitu.

The aggressive Communists were said to have recaptured Ankui and Pingtu, 66 and 53 miles, respectively, northwest of Tsingtao on the north-south Tsingtao-Tsinan railway.

Another dispatch reported Red attacks on Linze, 120 miles northwest of Tsingtao, where the Communists sought to capture the steel bridge spanning the Tzeho river.

by Soviet Vice Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, the widow of the late president said it was possible for the United Nations to agree on a workable refugee program. But she said Vishinsky must concede the right of other delegates to disagree with some of the Soviet points of view.

She chided Russia for calling refugees Fascists because they refused to return to their now Soviet-dominated homelands. "As Mr. Vishinsky uses it, it would seem that democracy is synonymous with Soviet, or at least a fairly similar, conception of political and economic questions," she said.

As for the Franco case, she reported at today's plenary meeting pushed the American and British delegation closer to a new test of their old refusal to support more than verbal action against Franco.

In the face of a tacitly-led Russian move for a universal rupture of diplomatic relations—a move which has the support of many countries from the Soviet orbit—the Anglo-Americans faced the necessity of eking out at least 18 votes to avoid a fast-growing demand for a universal break in diplomatic relations with Spain. Each united nation has one vote in the assembly and any important matter requires a two-thirds majority, 34 votes, to pass.

Poland has growing support for her formal resolution calling for a diplomatic isolation of Franco. Byelo-Russia wants the break extensions to commerce and communications.

After two and a half weeks of plenary meetings and committee sessions, other major issues confronting the assembly were bedded down in tension and suspense.

Meanwhile there was speculation whether the Republicans would move to put a member of their party in a position to succeed to the presidency in the absence of a vice-president.

Succession Bill Studied

Reps. C. R. Robertson, R., N. D., Halleck and Jenkins said the GOP steering committee probably would discuss the advisability of reintroducing the presidential succession bill recommended last year by Mr. Truman. The bill was approved by the house but died in the senate.

Under the bill, the speaker of the house would be next in line for the presidency after the vice president.

Sen. Joseph H. Ball, R., Minn., said he thought the GOP might sponsor legislation limiting presidential tenure to two four-year terms.

That measure, one of Martin's pets, was in the 1944 Republican platform.

Republicans Dominate Ohio's 97th Assembly

bert will wield the gavel. It not be a new task for Herbert since he was lieutenant governor for six years under a previous Republican administration.

Sen. Frank E. Whittemore, R., Summit, is expected to be offered the post of speaker pro tem and majority floor leader which he held in the retiring legislature.

The minority Democratic party, however, will be faced with the job of choosing a new spokesman since Sen. Maurice Lipscher, D., Mahoning, who held the post in the last two years did not seek re-election.

In the lower house, a successor to speaker Jackson Betts, R., Findlay, must be chosen. Betts also did not seek re-election.

Rep. Robert Shaw, R., Franklin, was returned to the house in last Tuesday's election. Shaw was majority house floor leader in the 96th general assembly and is likely to be named to that post again.

A minority house leader must also be named. During the closing days of the 96th assembly this post was held by John Carney, D., Cleveland.

Republican leaders have expressed concern that the heavy GOP representation in both houses must be held together by strong leadership or might resolve into a number of blocks.

With the post-war program commission created by the last legislature ready to report when the new assembly meets, a heavy schedule has been anticipated for early next year.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS
By PAUL MALLON
WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—This is the easiest column I have ever written. You need not go very deep or very far to get the right answers to the election result. The Republicans, who won, say it meant the country was practically unanimously tired of compromising with radicalism. The Democrats, who lost, (or at least a leader who talked forthrightly) said the country was tired of standing in line for food. My own personal opinion is that if the Republicans had not won this election there would have been no need to hold any more. The Democrats had committed every political blunder in the book on the legislative issues of the day. Indeed they tried to write a new book based on unreason. Here they had a congress about equally divided among Democrats the past two years, a congress which clearly did not like White House policies. The campaign efforts were not directed toward healing the breach in the party, but events widened it, one event in particular, the sending of Mr. Wallace, the commerce secretary, into New York to a CIO-PAC meeting with a foreign policy different from the administration's own policy. That very administration foreign policy was being ardently maintained practically alone by state Secretary Byrnes in Paris against the bitterest Russian opposition at that very moment—an opposition so bitter that Byrnes had to send for Republican Senator Vandenberg to back him up, along with the Democratic Senate Chairman Connally of the foreign relations committee. That was the break of the campaign. Yet it merely exposed for all to see the basic fault of the campaign of becoming involved with that element. Such involvement could not possibly lead to anything else but a break like that because you simply cannot run on one ticket at home, or in certain parts of your home, and another ticket internationally before the world when the front pages are practically absorbed for weeks and months before election with news of Russia's vetoing of the peace. If that made sense to anyone, it certainly did not to the preponderant numbers of the American people. When you add to that, a wholly unsatisfactory domestic situation which people not only saw but felt individually in their daily lives—such things as the conflict over food, wages, prices, unions—the people quite plainly said they wanted no more of it. No mind reader is necessary to figure that out. As a matter of fact you read here last October 11, nearly a month before election, a prediction which afterward proved popular, and was made subsequently by many (although I believe by no one publicly at that time) namely: the Republicans privately believed they would win more than they claimed; that they could win a sweep of the country if the unions failed to back the Democrats at the polls; and my personal prediction that the minimum Republican majority in the house would be 16 or 17 seats or more, and come within 1 or 2 seats of capturing the senate or more, depending on the scope of the union split. Talk was later started generally that there had been a swing to the Democrats after decontrol of OPA brought out the food, but you will notice there was no change or hedging of the original prediction in this column. It was merely repeated to you the Friday before election. Look it up, if you do not believe me.

WALKING
CHARLES Francis Adams III walks to his office, half mile or so along Boston streets after leaving the train that brings him in from his Concord home. So unusual it is for an American to walk, that it was commented on at length in a recent issue of Time Magazine. Mr. Adams, at 80, never has learned to drive an automobile, and evidently has no intention of doing so. His ancestors, John and John Quincy Adams, two presidents of the United States, had walked. Likewise their descendants down to the present head of the line. For a few years, during gasoline rationing, other Americans walked—to the local motion picture house, to church, to the grocery, to the neighbors for an evening call, to the bus. Americans for a spell found they still had legs and still knew how to use them. But they're riding everywhere again, around the corner to the shoemaker's, to the restaurant in the next block, in a taxi from bank to office building, or to catch a train. And walking is such fun! It slows one down, sets a person in a true relationship to time and space. Those war years taught, for a little while at least, that folks could use their legs.

A common complaint of management in current labor disputes is that the giving of ground is all done by management, while what are called "labor's gains" are rigid in that respect. A heartening note is struck, however, by the new contract between the CIO and the Gimbel department store in New York City. This allows management to renegotiate wages if the cost of living swings downward, thus balancing labor's right to the same privilege when the prices of essentials go higher. Not only does this result in fairer treatment of the employer, but also a step has been taken in the application of economic principles to wage disputes. Real progress seems to have been made and a precedent established which may smooth the path of much-tried labor negotiators.

HARDY CHURCH MEMBERS
OUR colonial forefathers must have been hardy souls. A collection of the lives of 17th century Harvard graduates says Nicholas Gilman of Durham, N. H., "would preach for eight hours or more, when some member of the congregation would lead him from the pulpit and walk him up and down outside until the screaming of the people still in the meeting house would draw him back to preach again." Nowadays people could not even stand eight consecutive hours at the movies. Better "lose face" as the Japs say than lose your own self-respect.

"The Authority on Authorities"
HOW WAS IT BID?
WHETHER TO lead the suit bid by your partner, against a No Trump game, or select some other suit, depends not only on the composition of your own holding, but on the way the contract was reached. If the declarer called No Trumps immediately after hearing your partner's bid, the chances are that he thinks he has it amply stopped. In such circumstances, it is especially incumbent on you to study your own holding to see if some other suit may offer a more hopeful defense. This was really unimaginative leading by West, when his task was so clearly delineated by the bidding, combined with a view of his own hand. Having a suit so near to solid in secondary cards, his clubs offered the most hopeful defense. The opponents had bid both diamonds and spades to show those suits in shape, and South's prompt call of No Trumps, right after East's 2 Hearts, indicated his lack of fear from that quarter and his expectation of making game if hearts were led. If West's weak hand had included nothing in clubs except five very low ones, with perhaps the nine-spot high, then his choice would not have been so clear-cut. But his actual holding was far from worthless, especially since on the bidding South might have been taking some degree of chance on having the clubs properly protected. It is easy to see, of course, that a club lead, with East playing the A, would have resulted in five immediate tricks for the defense.
Your Week-End Question
Do you know why many veteran players call the spade suit "The Overcoat," also what are the advantages and disadvantages of the suit as against others during the bidding?

Today's Horoscope
You have persistence and determination, and never acknowledge defeat. You do not confide in others, but like to work out your plans alone and in your own way. You have many friends, and are well liked by all. Your home life will be contented and happy.
The Birthday Forecast
Those whose birthday it is may be surprised at the sudden presentation of an interesting offer, proposition or gesture of encouragement and friendliness, coming from influential source in either public or private office. Such a proposal may be of major importance and calls for an astute, careful and expansive analysis, with proper readjustments or fresh angles, before final decisions are arrived at. The progress of such transactions depends upon keen acumen and sound business sagacity.
A child born on this day has good prospects for success and good position in life, assisted by those in high place and prestige.
For Sunday, November 10
SUNDAY'S horoscope calls for a definite pattern of conservative behavior, especially relating to all spoken and written speech, with calm reaction to aggravating, intemperate and rash acts, perhaps the home being the scene of friction, irritability and inharmonious. However, social and romantic affairs are also jeopardized and call for tact, finesse, with charm and personality more effective than strife and crass realism. Be glamorous and amiable.
For the Birthday
Those whose birthday it is should take themselves in hand to outline a program of accomplishment, compromise, pleasant contacts and lucrative agreements, during a year which may be beset with misunderstandings, friction, wrangling and inharmonies. They may be prone to intemperance and one in spades. In diamonds and one in spades. This was really unimaginative leading by West, when his task was so clearly delineated by the bidding, combined with a view of his own hand. Having a suit so near to solid in secondary cards, his clubs offered the most hopeful defense. CHAPTER NINETEEN
THEY WERE sitting at the card table when the opening of the front door brought in a rush of wind . . . and Kirby.
"Look what the wind blew in!" she called cheerfully, and went at once toward the fire, a tall girl in a mink coat, her cheeks flaming. She glanced backward at the cards and laughed. "Playing games? How elementary!"
The words, though unintentionally hurting, nevertheless hit a vulnerable spot in Chris's pride. He gathered up the cards in his hands. "Yes, this is pretty elementary stuff. But we've finished for a time, now that you're here."
"What a grand surprise, your coming out to see us," Lydia said. "I believe you mean it," Kirby said. "In that case, I'll take off my coat."
Lydia curled up in her chair. "Why should I say it if I don't mean it, Kirby?"
"You haven't been around much, dear. Lots of people say things they don't mean."
She slipped out of the expensive coat and put it aside as casually as if it had been a smock.
Lydia said, "It's a very beautiful coat, Kirby. I've admired it before."
Kirby shrugged. "It's just a coat to me. I didn't want Raphael to give it to me when he gave Mother hers. But he's like that—lavish. I feel self-conscious in it. I'm crazy, I guess, but I always think how many hungry people the price of it would feed. I'd rather have a good English tweed."
She looked like a schoolgirl today in a casual brown gabardine dress.
"How is Alan?" Chris asked.
She said he was fine. Then turning about with her hands clasped behind her she said, "It wasn't Mother's idea that he stay with the nurse. It was mine—and not because I wasn't sleeping well. It's true I wasn't, but his crying didn't keep me awake. I wouldn't have slept anyway. I'm all right now and I sleep fairly well, but I keep him with the nurse because . . . well, I don't want to bother them. Babies' things take up so much room and I didn't want Raphael to be bored with having a baby around."
Chris's eyes narrowed. "You're not selfish, I must say."
Kirby smiled a little self-consciously. "Thank you. I told you because I didn't want you to get the wrong slant. My mother deserves her happiness. I'd bend over backwards to see that she keeps it."
"What of your happiness, Kirby?" Lydia asked.
"Alan and I have more time than she has," Kirby answered promptly.
During the hour before lunch, while they talked superficially of various things, Lydia felt Kirby's stiff self-defense relax. What had happened to the girl that she seemed to live in a state of self-defense, her warmth walled in, as if she must ever be ready to protect herself against a foe? And everyone was potentially a foe, everyone except her baby, with whom she could play so gayly and tenderly.
At least part of her relaxing today came, Lydia thought, from her obvious wish to be approved by Chris. It was nothing that she did or said, but rather the way she looked at him—as if he could do no wrong. Kirby had neither father nor brother nor husband. And her driving out today, Lydia thought, was an overture of friendship from one who was either too silent or too harsh with words to have many friends. She could not even keep her child with her. Frances brought the lunch in on trays. After lunch Chris said he had to write some letters.
Kirby suggested a walk. She and Lydia got their coats and Lydia a shawl for her head and they walked out into the windy sunshine.
Kirby tossed her luxuriant hair as she glanced back at the house. "That house has so many memories for me," she said. "I've been trying to get up my courage for weeks to come out and face it again. Everywhere I remember Alan. He's everywhere, even walking like this. Do you and Chris ever walk on a cold day?"
"Often, and from the very beginning."
"The plans that this war has blasted into oblivion. We had plans for what we were going to do after the war and where we were going to live. The plans that have had to be scrapped . . ."
"Do the men who make wars ever think of things like that, the plans of little people, I wonder?"
"Alan didn't aspire to be like Chris. He knew he didn't have it. He had limitations and lacks. I loved him for them. After Andrew I liked people with imperfections. Andrew thought he was perfect."
"I learned from knowing Andrew how to be tolerant, even to like people who make innocent mistakes, who do things on the impulse. I was afraid at first that you were perfect. But you're not." She smiled a little. "The day you came to see me in town the left seam of your stocking was crooked and I was glad."
"I've heard you speak of Andrew before and very bitterly," Lydia before. She added, "Of course, I have flaws. No one is perfect."
"You're wrong, dear. Andrew is perfect. But don't get me started on him."
"But I'd like to know about him, Kirby."
"I don't know why I talk too much with you. I never talk. But with you I feel—oh, sort of free. It's like thinking aloud."
"Chris and I want you to feel you can tell us anything."
"There's nothing to tell except that I'm trying to live in the present. Do you know how I feel? As if I'm just coming out of a dark hole where I've been crying. The sun hurts my eyes, but I'm trying to stand the light. I couldn't believe that life was going on just the same, that women still carried about clothes and that a sunny afternoon on Park Avenue is a beautiful sight. I thought the world had stopped and everyone had gone into a hole to cry as I had because Alan was dead."
"But you know, you must, that it isn't, Kirby. And yet sometimes I think it takes less courage to live in the past than in the present."
"I'm alive and this is my present and I've got to learn how to live in it without Alan. I've got to make some plans, start feeling and living again. The last few months are blacked out. I felt nothing but grief and loss and hate. When I had Alan, I stopped hating. Knowing Andrew taught me to hate. Knowing Alan taught me to love."
Lydia said, "I can't share your feelings, Kirby. And sympathy is too tepid a thing to comfort you. But like Chris you must live in the present, too. Your life with Alan was like a door that opened and closed. Another door will open. He would want it so."
"You mean I'll be in love with someone else? I wonder. I feel dead inside now. Comforted. I can't feel anything except old. I feel so old. It was just an accident that Alan and I got along so well, that we liked and wanted the same things. In the beginning we just wanted each other. But then we found we didn't give a hang about success or a lot of money and that we both wanted to live in a small town. I think we laughed about it, but we found we both smoked the same brand of cigarettes and we were both crazy about eating spaghetti in funny, smelly little places. Not to be funny, that was it, the most wonderful part of it all. . . . Not to be alone."
"I know so well what you mean," Lydia said earnestly. "I used to look at married people, even at my own parents, and wonder what they got out of it. I know now. Beautiful things are more beautiful when you share them with someone close to you and hard things are not quite as hard to bear when someone else is there."
"Not to be alone," Kirby said, nodding. "That was it, the most wonderful part of it. I'd been battling it out so long alone. And I mean battling it out."
"With Andrew."
Kirby lifted her brows. "You want to hear about Andrew? Okay, I'll tell you. . . . My mother and I came from a small New England town you've heard of. A shaded, quiet little place. I'll always remember the trees there in the summer and autumn. My mother married my father when she was 17 and my father's greatest ambition was to be foreman in the mill. I don't remember him at all. He died when I was three and I went to live with my grandparents, my mother's parents, and my mother went to Boston and got a job. After a while she went to New York and worked for an interior decorator. . . . Maybe we'd better turn around and start walking back."
"Yes, let's do," Lydia said

Horoscope for Sunday
If you are celebrating a birthday on this Sabbath day, you like to lead, and will not take a secondary position if you can possibly help it. You are very public spirited, and quite philanthropic. You love travel, reading and good music. You should marry someone who is sympathetic towards your broad interests. The moon enters Gemini at 4:17 a. m. Take care in seeking medicines and inflammables. Caution is required in giving directions. Be very explicit or you may be misunderstood and cause an embarrassing situation. Later in the day extreme caution will no longer be necessary, and you can relax from the vigilance advised above. The late hours of the day are fine for meditation, contemplation, and philosophical Sabbath thoughts.

A Type of Paralysis That Causes Tremors of the Limbs
By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
INFLAMMATION of the brain is known as encephalitis. It may be produced by a number of different viruses such as Von Economo's type or the St. Louis type. Following an attack of encephalitis a condition known as paralysis agitans or Parkinson's disease may occur. The symptoms of the paralysis agitans may very rarely develop within a few weeks but usually after a number of years following the encephalitis. Paralysis agitans, however, may develop in patients who have never had encephalitis. The exact cause in these cases is not known.
Sense Organs Unaffected
Paralysis agitans does not affect the sense organs, such as those of hearing, or of eyesight. It causes a tremor or trembling motion of the arms and hands and a lessening of muscular power. The patient usually bends forward when walking and has a tendency to pass from a walking to a running pace.
It is not a difficult matter to make a diagnosis of paralysis agitans. The cases produced by encephalitis or brain inflammation may occur at any age. All the other cases occur in the middle age, with rare exceptions. The real problem in this disorder is to carry out treatment which will check the progress of the disorder.
According to Dr. Oscar Hawkins of Oak Park, Illinois, one of the most important things is to keep up the patient's morale. The patient should continue in some useful occupation as long as possible. A warm climate is desirable so that the patient can be kept in the open. The drugs which have been found most helpful are those coming from belladonna, sedative or quieting drugs, and those which help to relieve pain.
Vitamins Important
It is also suggested that care be taken to make sure that the patient gets all of the necessary vitamins in liberal amounts. This form of treatment will not produce a cure. However, certain operations have been devised which do seem to stop the tremor and rigidity of the muscles. Before such operations are carried out, however, the patients must be carefully studied to determine if there is any likelihood of the operation being of some value. Of course, operation should not be done if it might produce crippling paralysis even though it does relieve the tremor and rigidity. The operation does not in any way interfere with normal mentality.

WALKING

CHARLES Francis Adams III walks to his office, half mile or so along Boston streets after leaving the train that brings him in from his Concord home. So unusual it is for an American to walk, that it was commented on at length in a recent issue of Time Magazine.

Mr. Adams, at 80, never has learned to drive an automobile, and evidently has no intention of doing so. His ancestors, John and John Quincy Adams, two presidents of the United States, had walked. Likewise their descendants down to the present head of the line.

For a few years, during gasoline rationing, other Americans walked—to the local motion picture house, to church, to the grocery, to the neighbors for an evening call, to the bus. Americans for a spell found they still had legs and still knew how to use them.

But they're riding everywhere again, around the corner to the shoemaker's, to the restaurant in the next block, in a taxi from bank to office building, or to catch a train.

And walking is such fun! It slows one down, sets a person in a true relationship to time and space. Those war years taught, for a little while at least, that folks could use their legs.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—This is the easiest column I have ever written. You need not go very deep or very far to get the right answers to the election result.

The Republicans, who won, say it meant the country was practically unanimously tired of compromising with radicalism.

The Democrats, who lost, (or at least a leader who talked forthrightly) said the country was tired of standing in line for food.

My own personal opinion is that if the Republicans had not won this election there would have been no need to hold any more. The Democrats had committed every political blunder in the book on the legislative issues of the day. Indeed they tried to write a new book based on unreason. Here they had a congress about equally divided among Democrats the past two years, a congress which clearly did not like White House policies. The campaign efforts were not directed toward healing the breach in the party, but events widened it, one event in particular, the sending of Mr. Wallace, the commerce secretary, into New York to a CIO-PAC meeting with a foreign policy different from the administration's own policy. That very administration foreign policy was being ardently maintained paritically alone by state Secretary Byrnes in Paris against the bitterest Russian opposition at that very moment—an opposition so bitter that Byrnes had to send for Republican Senator Vandenberg to back him up, along with the Democratic Senate Chairman Connally of the foreign relations committee.

That was the break of the campaign. Yet it merely exposed for all to see the basic fault of the campaign of becoming involved with that element. Such involvement could not possibly lead to anything else but a break like that because you simply cannot run on one ticket at home, or in certain parts of your home, and another ticket internationally before the world when the front pages are practically absorbed for weeks and months before election with news of Russia's vetoing of the peace.

If that made sense to anyone, it certainly did not to the preponderant numbers of the American people.

When you add to that, a wholly unsatisfactory domestic situation which people not only saw but felt individually in their daily lives—such things as the conflict over food, wages, prices, unions—the people quite plainly said they wanted no more of it. No mind reader is necessary to figure that out.

As a matter of fact you read here last October 11, nearly a month before election, a prediction which afterward proved popular, and was made subsequently by many (although I believe by no one publicly at that time) namely: the Republicans privately believed they would win more than they claimed; that they could win a sweep of the country if the unions failed to back the Democrats at the polls; and my personal prediction that the minimum Republican majority in the house would be 16 or 17 seats or more, and come within 1 or 2 seats of capturing the senate or more, depending on the scope of the union split.

Talk was later started generally that there had been a swing to the Democrats after decontrol of OPA brought out the food, but you will notice there was no change or hedging of the original prediction in this column. It was merely repeated to you the Friday before election. Look it up, if you do not believe me.

in diamonds and one in spades. This was really unimaginative leading by West, when his task was so clearly delineated by the bidding, combined with a view of his own hand. Having a suit so near to solid in secondary cards, his clubs offered the most hopeful defense. The opponents had bid both diamonds and spades to show those suits in shape, and South's prompt call of No Trumps, right after East's 2-Hearts, indicated his lack of fear from that quarter and his expectation of making game if hearts were led.

If West's weak hand had included nothing in clubs except five very low ones, with perhaps the nine-spot high, then his choice would not have been so clear-cut. But his actual holding was far from worthless, especially since on the bidding South might have been taking some degree of chance on having the clubs properly protected. It is easy to see, of course, that a club lead, with East playing the A, would have resulted in five immediate tricks for the defense.

Your Week-End Question

Do you know why many veteran players call the spade suit "The Overcoat," also what are the advantages and disadvantages of the suit as against others during the bidding?

CHAPTER NINETEEN

THEY WERE sitting at the card table when the opening of the front door brought in a rush of wind . . . and Kirby.

"Look what the wind blew in!" she called cheerfully, and went at once toward the fire, a tall girl in a mink coat, her cheeks flaming. She glanced backward at the cards and laughed. "Playing games? How elementary!"

The words, though unintentionally hurting, nevertheless hit a vulnerable spot in Chris's pride. He gathered up the cards in his hands. "Yes, this is pretty elementary stuff. But we've finished for a time, now that you're here."

"What a grand surprise, your coming out to see us," Lydia said. "I believe you mean it," Kirby said. "In that case, I'll take off my coat."

Lydia curled up in her chair. "Why should I say it if I don't mean it, Kirby?"

"You haven't been around much, dear. Lots of people say things they don't mean."

She slipped out of the expensive coat and put it aside as casually as if it had been a smock.

Lydia said, "It's a very beautiful coat, Kirby. I've admired it before."

Kirby shrugged. "It's just a coat to me. I didn't want Raphael to give it to me when he gave Mother hers. But he's like that—lavish. I feel self-conscious in it. I'm crazy, I guess, but I always think how many hungry people the price of it would feed. I'd rather have a good English tweed."

She looked like a schoolgirl today in a casual brown gabardine dress.

"How is Alan?" Chris asked. She said he was fine. Then turning about with her hands clasped behind her she said, "It wasn't Mother's idea that he stay with the nurse. It was mine—and not because I wasn't sleeping well. It's true I wasn't, but his crying didn't keep me awake. I wouldn't have slept anyway. I'm all right now and I sleep fairly well, but I keep him with the nurse because . . . well, I don't want to bother them. Babies' things take up so much room and I didn't want Raphael to be bored with having a baby around."

Chris's eyes narrowed. "You're not selfish, I must say."

Kirby smiled a little self-consciously. "Thank you. I told you because I didn't want you to get the wrong slant. My mother deserves her happiness. I'd bend over backwards to see that she keeps it."

"What of your happiness, Kirby?" Lydia asked.

"Alan and I have more time than she has," Kirby answered promptly.

During the hour before lunch, while they talked superficially of various things, Lydia felt Kirby's stiff self-defense relax. What had happened to the girl that she seemed to live in a state of self-defense, her warmth walled in, as if she must ever be ready to protect herself against a foe? And everyone was potentially a foe, everyone except her baby, with whom she could play so gayly and tenderly.

At least part of her relaxing today came, Lydia thought, from her obvious wish to be approved by Chris. It was nothing that she did or said, but rather the way she looked at him—as if he could do no wrong. Kirby had neither father nor brother nor husband. And her driving out today, Lydia thought, was an overture of friendship from one who was either too silent or too harsh with words to have many friends. She could not even keep her child with her. Frances brought the lunch in on trays. After lunch Chris said he had to write some letters.

Kirby suggested a walk. She and Lydia got their coats and Lydia a scarf for her head and they walked out into the windy sunshine.

Kirby tossed her luxuriant hair as she glanced back at the house. "That house has so many memories for me," she said. "I've been trying to get up my courage for weeks to come out and face it again. Everywhere I remember Alan. He's everywhere, even walking like this. Do you and Chris ever walk on a cold day?"

"Often, and from the very beginning."

"The plans that this war has blasted into oblivion. We had plans for what we were going to do after the war and where we were going to live. The plans that have had to be scrapped . . ."

"Do the men who make wars ever think of things like that, the plans of little people, I wonder?"

"Alan didn't aspire to be like Chris. He knew he didn't have it. He had limitations and lacks. I loved him for them. After Andrew I liked people with imperfections. Andrew thought he was perfect."

"I learned from knowing Andrew how to be tolerant even to like people who make innocent mistakes, who do things on the impulse. I was afraid at first that you were perfect. But you're not." She smiled a little. "The day you came to see me in town the left seam of your stocking was crooked and I was glad."

"I've heard you speak of Andrew before and very bitterly," Lydia said. She added, "Of course, I have flaws. No one is perfect."

"You're wrong, dear. Andrew is perfect. But don't get me started on him."

"But I'd like to know about him, Kirby."

"I don't know why I talk too much with you. I never talk. But with you I feel—oh, sort of free. It's like thinking aloud."

"Chris and I want you to feel you can tell us anything."

"There's nothing to tell except that I'm trying to live in the present. Do you know how I feel? As if I'm just coming out of a dark hole where I've been crying. The sun hurts my eyes, but I'm trying to stand the light. I couldn't believe that life was going on just the same, that women still cared about clothes and that a sunny afternoon on Park Avenue is a beautiful sight. I thought the world had stopped and everyone had gone into a hole to cry as I had because Alan was dead."

"But you know, you must, that it hasn't, Kirby. And yet sometimes I think it takes less courage to live in the past than in the present."

"I'm alive and this is my present and I've got to learn how to live in it without Alan. I've got to make some plans, start feeling and living again. The last few months are blacked out. I felt nothing but grief and loss and hate. When I had Alan, I stopped hating. Knowing Alan taught me to hate. Knowing Alan taught me to love."

Lydia said, "I can't share your feelings, Kirby. And sympathy is too tepid a thing to comfort you. But like Chris you must live in the present, too. Your life with Alan was like a door that opened and closed. Another door will open. He would want it so."

"You mean I'll be in love with someone else? I wonder. I feel dead inside now. Could I feel anything except old? I feel so old. I was just an accident that Alan and I got along so well, that we liked and wanted the same things. In the beginning we just wanted each other. But then we found we didn't give a hang about success or a lot of money and that we both wanted to live in a small town. It's funny, we laughed about it, but we found we both smoked the same brand of cigarettes and we had to be scraped . . ."

"Do the men who make wars ever think of things like that, the plans of little people, I wonder?"

"Alan didn't aspire to be like Chris. He knew he didn't have it. He had limitations and lacks. I loved him for them. After Andrew I liked people with imperfections. Andrew thought he was perfect."

Pickaway Garden Clubs Meet At Williamsport

Ries and Best Are Speakers At All Day Session

Pickaway county all day garden club meeting was held Friday in the Methodist church, Williamsport. Deercreek garden club served as the hostess group for the occasion. During registration in the morning Miss Ruth France played an organ interlude.

Mrs. Donald Linkous, president of the Deercreek club, welcomed the visitors. One-hundred and twenty-five persons were present for the all day session which opened with a salute to the flag led by Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker, Williamsport.

Mrs. Donald H. Watt, regional director of district 9, was introduced. She presided throughout the remainder of the day.

The Rev. J. H. Sudlow gave the invocation.

Short reports were given by Mrs. Glenn L. Smith, president of the Marilee garden club, Fayette county; William Cook, president of the Circleville garden club; Mrs. James Hott, president of Soliqua club; Mrs. Harold Beavers, vice president of the Commercial Point club; Mrs. William Cromley, president of the Ashville club and Mrs. Turney Pontius, vice president of the Pickaway club.

Mrs. Watt addressed the group. She pointed out that the Ohio association of garden clubs is the second largest garden club organization in the United States with a membership of 11,000. Rewards for the best year books were distributed with first prize going to Mt. Logan club at Chillicothe; second to Floral garden club, Jackson and honorable mention to Rainbow club, Jackson.

Scioto and Frankfort, Ross county, received the prize for the greatest amount of civic achievements.

District 9 has now been enlarged. Mrs. Watt explained. In the territory are Hocking, Fayette and Franklin counties, in addition to Pickaway, Ross and Jackson counties.

Mrs. Orion King, program-speaker chairman, gave a report, as did Mrs. Royal V. Hamman, Pickaway county contact chairman, who reviewed the highlights of the state convention.

Larry Best, county agricultural agent gave the main talk of the morning. He used as his subject, "Care and Management of Lawns". He prefaced his remarks with an urgent plea to encourage Junior garden clubs. A nice appearing lawn is a prime requisite in home beautification plans. This can be achieved, Mr. Best explained, by fertilization in Spring or Fall. He advised against the use of lime in Pickaway county. He does not advise reseeding unless large areas are bare. Mr. Best also said that too close mowing destroys the grass stand and that the mower should be set to cut the grass two inches.

A question and answer hour followed Mr. Best's talk. At the end of this period, luncheon was served in the church parish house.

Miss France played several organ selections for the opening of the afternoon session. Mrs. Ernest J. Gerber, Ross county contact chairman gave the report of the 15 garden clubs in her county.

Charles Gallaher, tenor, offered two vocal selections, "In My Garden" by Ida Bell Firestone and "The Builder" by Kadmann.

Professor Victor H. Ries, extension floriculturist, Ohio State university was the guest speaker. His subject was "Evergreens". Prof. Ries, who is a broadleaf evergreen enthusiast, urged the use of evergreens in home plantings for home beautification. He displayed cuttings of various evergreen ground covers, vines and shrubs. He was asked many questions regarding these plantings, evidence of the interest of members of the garden clubs.

Professor Ries judged the flower show. Williamsport received first place with 8 ribbons, and Soliqua, Ashville, took second prize with 7 ribbons. There were 50 arrangements in the show.

'GLORIES OF OLD AND NEW' SUNDAY SERMON TOPIC

"Glories of the Old and the New" is the sermon topic chosen by the Rev. Carl L. Wilson for the divine worship service at the First United Brethren church, East Main street, Sunday at 10:30 a. m.

In announcing this topic, the Rev. Wilson says, "In view of the approaching United General Conference at Johnstown, Pennsylvania, Saturday, November 16, when the merger of the United Brethren church and the Evangelical church will be consummated, it will be helpful to review the rich background and early history of the United Brethren church and the Evangelical church."

The scriptural text to be used for the sermon presentation may be read from Ephesians 5:25-27. The choir will give an appropriate setting for the sermon by singing, "Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken" by Newton. Miss Lucille Kirkwood will preside at the console and offer "Barcarolle" by Offenbach; "Meditation" by Berwald; and "Exultate Deo" by Williams.

Children under twelve years of age will meet in the children's chapel at 10:30 o'clock for Junior Church with the lesson presented in juvenile terms by Mrs. Carl L. Wilson, with Mrs. Montford Kirkwood, Jr. and Miss Gladys Noggle assisting.

At 6 p. m. in the Sunday School Room, the Youth Fellowship will meet with the Rev. Carl L. Wilson leading the meeting.

"We Choose Our World" is the evening worship sermon theme at 7:30 o'clock.

'Forward Together' Is Calvary Church Subject For Sunday

"Forward Together With Christ" is the theme of the morning message at Calvary Evangelical church on Sunday.

The pastor will center his thoughts around the Scripture as found in Exodus 14. Such a message is very fitting at this time, as this week in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, the General Conference of the United Brethren church and of the Evangelical church will meet, and will officially become one on Saturday, November 16.

The new church will be known as the Evangelical United Brethren church, whose slogan for the first four years of union will be "Forward Together With Christ."

The choir anthem for the morning will be "Sing, O Heav'ns."

At the Sunday evening service the pastor will continue a series of messages on the parables of Jesus.

Pickaway Garden Clubs Meet At Williamsport

Ries and Best Are Speakers At All Day Session

Pickaway county all day garden club meeting was held Friday in the Methodist church, Williamsport. Deercreek garden club served as the hostess group for the occasion. During registration in the morning Miss Ruth France played an organ interlude.

Mrs. Donald Linkous, president of the Deercreek club, welcomed the visitors. One hundred and twenty five persons were present for the all day session which opened with a salute to the flag led by Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker, Williamsport.

Mrs. Donald H. Watt, regional director of district 9, was introduced. She presided throughout the remainder of the day.

The Rev. J. H. Sudlow gave the invocation. Short reports were given by Mrs. Glenn L. Smith, president of the Marietta garden club, Fayette county; William Cook, president of the Circleville garden club; Mrs. James Hott, president of Solonville club; Mrs. Harold Beavers, vice president of the Commercial Point club; Mrs. William Cromley, president of the Ashville club; Mrs. Turney Pontius, vice president of the Pickaway club.

Mrs. Watt addressed the group. She pointed out that the Ohio Association of garden clubs is the second largest garden club organization in the United States with a membership of 11,000. Rewards for the best year books were distributed with first prize going to Mt. Logan club at Chillicothe; second to Floral garden club, Jackson and honorable mention to Rainbow club, Jackson.

Scotlo and Frankfort, Ross county, received the prize for the greatest amount of civic achievements. District 9 has now been enlarged. Mrs. Watt explained. In the territory are Hocking, Fayette and Franklin counties, in addition to Pickaway, Ross and Jackson counties.

Mrs. Orion King, program-speaker chairman, gave a report, as did Mrs. Royal V. Hamman, Pickaway county contact chairman, who reviewed the highlights of the state convention.

Larry Best, county agricultural agent gave the main talk of the morning. He used as his subject, "Care and Management of Lawns". He prefaced his remarks with an urgent plea to encourage Junior garden clubs. A nice appearing lawn is a prime requisite in home beautification plans. This can be achieved, Mr. Best explained, by fertilization in Spring or Fall. He advised against the use of lime in Pickaway county. He does not advise reseeding unless large areas are bare. Mr. Best also said that too close mowing destroys the grass stand and that the mower should be set to cut the grass two inches.

A question and answer hour followed Mr. Best's talk. At the end of this period, luncheon was served in the church parish house.

Miss France played several organ selections for the opening of the afternoon session. Mrs. Ernest J. Gerber, Ross county contact chairman gave the report of the 15 garden clubs in her county.

Charles Gallaher, tenor, offered two vocal selections, "In My Garden" by Ida Bell Firestone and "The Builder" by Kadmann.

Professor Victor H. Ries, extension floriculturist, Ohio State university was the guest speaker. His subject was "Evergreens". Prof. Ries, who is a broadleaf evergreen enthusiast, urged the use of evergreens in home plantings for home beautification. He displayed cuttings of various evergreen ground covers, vines and shrubs. He was asked many questions regarding these plantings, evidence of the interest of members of the garden clubs.

Professor Ries judged the flower show. Williamsport received first place with 8 ribbons, and Solonville, Ashville, took second prize with 7 ribbons. There were 50 arrangements in the show.

SALT CREEK FIVE WINS 61 TO 22 OVER ADELPHI

Salt Creek cagers had an open date in the Pickaway county league Friday night and used it to score their second victory of the young season.

With R. Jones making 24 points, Salt Creek walloped Adelphi, Ross county neighbor, 61-22. Luckhart contributed 15 points to the big total. P. Miller had 7 for the losers.

Salt Creek also took the reserve game, winning 28-19.

Last week Salt Creek opened the season with a 31-12 win over Laurelville.

The victory gave the Tigers a 5-4 record for the season and third place in the South Central Ohio league.

The two plays that did the scoring were a Bob Steele to Rod Heine pass good for 35 yards and a touchdown and a perfect placekick by Steele with Heine holding the ball. But the story goes back much farther than that.

The officials said five minutes to play and it seemed a signal to the Tigers. For three periods and a half both teams had taken turns threatening the other's goal line with both teams making gallant back-to-the-wall stands.

Washington C. H. had the ball on their own 46 yard line when the five-minute signal came. Trying to shake their ace, Bob Kelly (who did not look like an ace Friday night), loose, the Blue Lions sent a pass back to him. He fumbled and that was all the Tigers needed. He tried to fall on the ball but about a half dozen Tigers helped him fall and Charles Sabine fell on the ball on the Washington 37.

Charles Thomas, playing right half in place of "Red" Crawford who suffered a sprained ankle in the second quarter, hit the line for a couple of yards.

Heine, who had been standing on the sidelines getting instructions from Coach Steve Brudnicki, raced into the game and joined the huddle. The Tigers came back to the line of scrimmage and Heine trotted out on a man in motion play. As the ball was snapped he raced around his own right end and hesitated on about the seven-yard line long enough to catch Steele's perfect pass, then dashed over the goal line without interference.

Steele promptly made the best kick he has made this year.

But the game was not over. Washington made a determined effort to score in the little more than three minutes left and drove to the Circleville 5 yard line before being stopped.

The Blue Lions took the short kickoff on their own 45 yard line. Two pass plays were no good then Wyatt was trapped for a 10 yard loss. They passed again and Davis was set to catch the pass when Ronnie Hennis rushed in and knocked the ball out of his hands. The umpire called interference and the Blue Lions had first down on the 50 yard line.

One pass failed, then Campbell hit Davis with a pass good to the 30 yard line. On the next play the same combination moved the ball to the 12. E. Sager went around end for three and the officials said 40 seconds of play was left. A short pass was good to the five and there were 20 seconds left. Two passes failed and the Tigers took over with 9 seconds left. One play into the line ended the game and season.

Both teams missed several opportunities to score. Alert defense by the Tigers stopped the Blue Lions six times. Three passes were intercepted and three fumbles recovered.

The first threat was by the Blue Lions and was stopped on the Circleville 10 when Bob Elsea and Sabine recovered a Blue Lion fumble.

Just after the second quarter started the Tigers made their longest march. Taking over on their own 37, they moved to the Washington 4 before yielding the ball on downs. On the first play Crawford got loose for 15 yards. Heine was trapped but a pass to him from Steele was good for 20 yards. Jim Carter smashed to the 21. Heine and Carter were stopped before another Steele to Heine pass was good for a first down on the 7-yard line. Carter inched the ball along, then a penalty set the Tigers back five yards. Heine got it back and more too, taking the ball to the 6. Carter drove to the 4 but Heine lost six yards and Washington took over on the 10.

Washington moved out fast but Heine intercepted a pass and the Tigers had the ball on their own 35.

A few minutes later Steele intercepted a Washington pass and raced to the Washington 7 before J. Sagar caught him. With 30 seconds left in the half, two pass plays were tried but failed. Steele and Heine were stopped and the Tigers penalized five yards before the time ran out.

In the third quarter Washington went to the Circleville 23 before being stopped, then came back with a drive that went to the six before the Tigers threw back the host team. Steele got two long punts from his own goal line to save the Tigers near the end of the period. The first went 55 yards but he had to kick again because of an undefeated and untied Army and Notre Dame battle before huge crowd.

BY OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The mythical national football championship gleamed on the 50-yard line as the fighting Irish of Notre Dame collided with Army at jam-packed Yankee stadium today in the 33rd renewal of one of the gridiron's greatest classics.

Both undefeated and untied, each team had a private crusade to be carried out as they squared off at 1:30 p. m. EST, in cool weather and under partly-cloudy skies before a crowd of approximately 74,000 fans. The odds were 6 to 5 and pick with neither able to draw the favorite's role.

Notre Dame's motive was one of vengeance. For during the past two years most of its current players were wearing Uncle Sam's colors. Army was rolling up a string of 25 consecutive triumphs. And two of those West Point wins were over the Irish—by humiliating scores of 59-0, worst in Notre Dame history, and 48-0.

As for Army, which added seven to its string this year, it, too, had a great incentive. The black knights wanted out from under the stigma of having been a carefully-selected team of ordinary players who fattened on weak wartime rivals.

Despite the loss of Herschel Fuson, a great defensive and blocking back, the Cadets figured that their two All-Americans—Glenn Davis and Felix (Doc) Blanchard—would give the Irish all they'd be able to handle. They have been the big guns for Army as they sought their third straight undefeated season by bowling over Villanova, Oklahoma, Cornell, Michigan, Columbia, Duke and West Virginia.

Frank Leahy, coach of the heavier Notre Dame team which outweighs Army 12 pounds to the man along the line, admitted he had no climax runner to match those two. But he did have depth, where Army was weak, and the Irish reserves showed their last ditch power in trampling Illinois, Purdue, Iowa, Pitt and Navy. That was Notre Dame's hope, to hold Army fairly even until the winning moments when reserve power would tell the final tale.

ENDS 46 SEASON WITH VICTORY

Steele To Heine Pass Good For Only Touchdown In Bitter SCO Game

Children's Book Week To Be Observed Here At Library Next Week

NEW BOOKS TO BE DISPLAYED DURING WEEK

Library Staff Puts Special Emphasis On Volumes Written For Children

BY ENID DENHAM

Children's Book Week will be celebrated this year from November 10 through 16 at the Circleville Public Library.

During this week, libraries, book-stores, schools, and radio are making a special effort to make known to all the very latest and best in new books for children. We know that children need books that they may find in them information they want, that they may share vicariously experiences in the emotional and intellectual life of others, that their curiosity may be both stimulated and satisfied. The very process of reading develops that skill, and, as the child grows his reading taste continues to develop. As he acquires interests and later hobbies, books may foster those interests and lead the child to his manhood vocation or a very pleasant or profitable avocation.

This year's theme for Book Week is "Books are Bridges".

No one can buy or own as many books as he wishes and for this reason, the public library acting in an educational function supplies the book hungry with the fare he needs. Only the very best of literature is purchased for the child, and selected with the greatest care and judgment. We do not carry many of the series that we or our parents read for they have not stood the test of time, nor do they add anything to the child's stature. Beautifully illustrated books in profusion are these children's birthright. Clear print, meaningful text suited to the age of the reader are prerequisites that still can be perfected in children's literature, for the latter too often fall short in comparison with the gay colorful drawings or pictures.

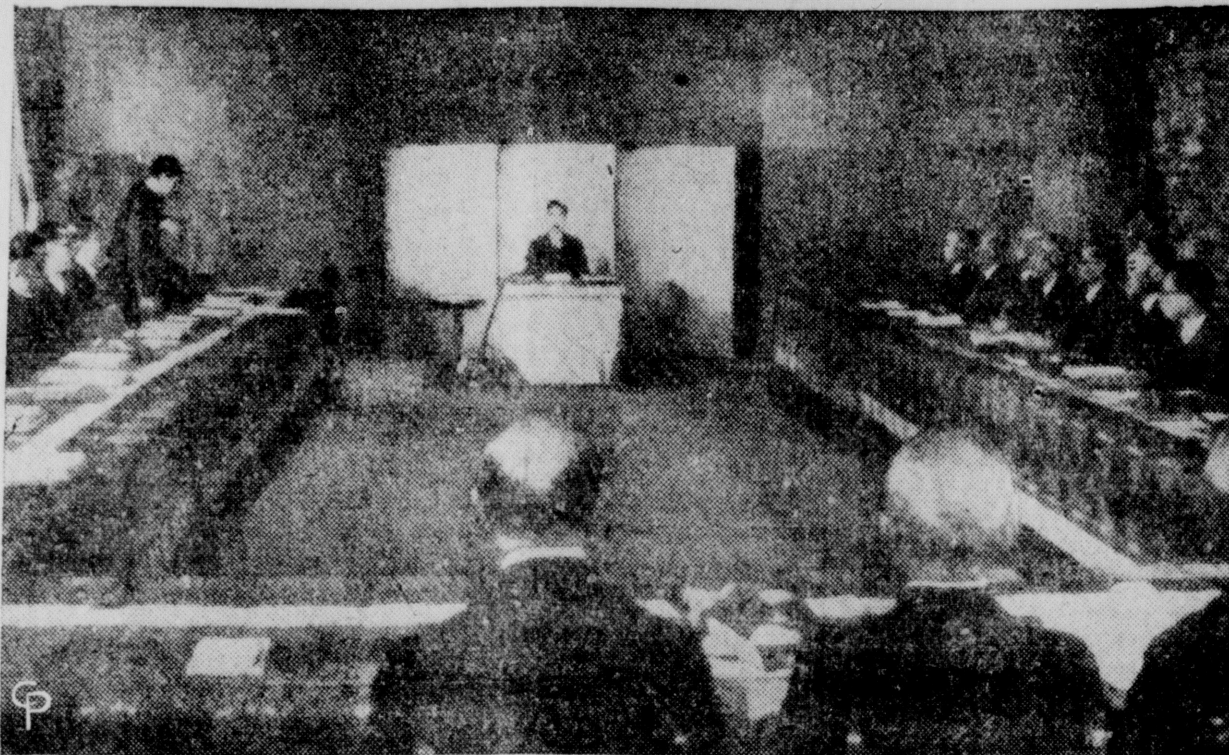

Many new books have been purchased for the juvenile department for the children this Fall. They will be on display during Children's Book week at the Circleville Library where it is expected that teachers and classes will visit to see them. All of these new books will be released for circulation the week following Book Week. In this way everyone will be able to see the displays intact.

The older boy or girl are inveterate hero worshippers and in their reading show this tendency in their devotion to biographies of famous people. Entertainingly written as they are today, biographies can serve as an inspiration to youth to live heroically. Certainly, true life accounts of hardships overcome and handicaps surmounted can be worthwhile guiding posts to our own teen agers. Such books are these: "Mercon, pioneer in Radio", by Coe, "Luther Burbank, Plant Magician", by Beaty, "Doctor Morton Pioneer in the Use of Ether", by Baker "Mayos, Pioneers in Medicine", by Regli, "Echo of A Cry", by Mai-Mai See, story of a Chinese girlhood of the New York Post's columnist, "Garibaldi", by Baker story of the Italian national hero, who with a handful of men overthrew a dynasty and unified Italy, then retired to his small farm to enjoy the simple life, refusing all reward save the respect of mankind. For girls there are two very special collected biographies, "Top-flight; famous American Women", edited by Anne Stoddard, stories of thirteen women who made good in as many fields; and "Mistresses of the White House", by Helen Morgan, stories of our "first ladies".

There are also at the library many new titles in the Row Peterson Scientific series and Social Studies series "Doing Work", "Plants Round the Year", "Animals Round the Year", "Plant and Animal Partnerships", "Electricity", "How the Sun Helps Us", "Planning Cities" and numerous other titles.

A few of our picture books are "Charcoal", by Coe, "Leaky Whale", "Pretz", and "The Puppies", by H. A. Rey, "Baruch Christmas Stocking", "This is the Way the Animals Walk", by Woodcock, "Time for Bed", by Inez Bertall, "Tinkie Tim", by Tousey, the author of the easy-to-read cowboy books, "Mookey and Tokey", by Janet Heath, story of two mischievous bear cubs who found a

80TH CONGRESS FLOOR LEADERS?

CHOICE OF MAJORITY leader in the 80th and Republican Congress will turn into a battle, according to observers, with Rep. Clarence J. Brown, top right, of Ohio and Rep. Brown, looked upon as the probable winner, was chief of the GOP campaign this year, while Halleck leaped into national prominence when he placed Wendell Willkie in nomination for presidency at Philadelphia. At the same time the Democrats face the likely resignation as floor leader of Rep. Sam Rayburn of Texas, 70th Congress speaker. Should Rayburn step down, observers are naming Rep. John W. McCormack, right, of Massachusetts as the new minority leader. (International)

VETERANS URGED TO MAKE REPORT

Many Former Servicemen Failed To File Papers By November 5

James Shea, Pickaway county veterans' service officer, Saturday urged World War II veterans in training under the GI Bill to send in their wage statements to the Veterans Administration.

A request that this be done immediately was received Saturday by Shea from Dr. Frank August, manager of the Cincinnati regional office of the Veterans Administration. Pickaway county is in the Cincinnati area.

"Although many veterans failed to meet the Nov. 5 deadline for these required wage reports, our VA Headquarters will still accept this data," Manager August stated. He also assured veterans in the 50 county area that in the review of all cases which will be instituted soon by the Cincinnati Regional VA Office, "Each delinquent veteran will be requested to furnish the desired wage information, and upon its receipt, payments will immediately be restored if wage data indicates that the veteran is still eligible."

Manager August especially noted that none of these new regulations apply to disabled veterans who are in training under the Vocational Rehabilitation program (Public Law 16). Disabled veterans who are training under the PL plan are not required to submit these special wage reports.

All veterans in training under the GI Bill who began training prior to Aug. 8 are required to furnish VA with a report of their wages for August, September, and October. Most veterans who have entered training after that date have supplied VA with reports or estimates of their monthly earnings.

Veterans who have not reported may mail their statements to the Cincinnati Regional VA Office, 209 East Sixth street, Cincinnati 2, Ohio, or may call at any VA Office for assistance in filing their report. It was pointed out that all communications to VA should bear the full name of the trainee veteran, and his "C" number.

Dr. August explained that such information is necessary for his office to make necessary subsistence adjustments required by recent legislation which forbids VA to pay subsistence allowances to veterans who earn outside wages exceeding $175 (single per month) or $200 (with dependents). VA can supplement wages with subsistence allowances of varying amounts, but outside earnings plus subsistence cannot exceed the statutory limits. Maximum subsistence allowances remain unchanged at $65 (single) and $90 (with dependents) per month.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

An editor just last week denounced me for making "too many mistakes—even for a columnist." The election certainly was not one of them. As a matter of fact, I cannot find any mistake he is talking about. His excessively abusive personal attack was based on my belief that people should not be chased out of their homes to locate the UN at any certain spot, but that to do so would delay the peace organization from getting an early home because it would only start a long legal fight. The editor thought that was one of my "mistakes." If that was a mistake I am proud to bear it, because I wrote from the standpoint of the people, the human standpoint, against dispossession of people.

The only reason I mention it is because that is the same people's viewpoint from which I wrote the election prediction. Politicians please take notice.

Opinions expressed by the writer in this column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald.

80TH CONGRESS FLOOR LEADERS?

CHOICE OF MAJORITY leader in the 80th and Republican Congress will turn into a battle, according to observers, with Rep. Clarence J. Brown, top right, of Ohio and Rep. Charles Halleck, above, of Indiana as contenders. Brown, looked upon as the probable winner, was chief of the GOP campaign this year, while Halleck leaped into national prominence when he placed Wendell Willkie in nomination for presidency at Philadelphia. At the same time the Democrats face the likely resignation as floor leader of Rep. Sam Rayburn of Texas, 79th Congress speaker. Should Rayburn step down, observers are naming Rep. John W. McCormack, right, of Massachusetts as the new minority leader. (International)

VETERANS URGED TO MAKE REPORT

Many Former Servicemen Failed To File Papers By November 5

James Shea, Pickaway county veterans' service officer, Saturday urged World War II veterans in training under the GI Bill to send in their wage statements to the Veterans Administration.

A request that this be done immediately was received Saturday by Shea from Dr. Frank August, manager of the Cincinnati regional office of the Veterans Administration. Pickaway county is in the Cincinnati area.

"Although many veterans failed to meet the Nov. 5 deadline for these required wage reports, our VA Headquarters will still accept this data," Manager August stated. He also assured veterans in the 50 county area that in the review of all cases which will be instituted soon by the Cincinnati Regional VA Office, "Each delinquent veteran will be requested to furnish the desired wage information, and upon its receipt, payments will immediately be restored if wage data indicates that the veteran is still eligible."

Manager August especially noted that none of these new regulations apply to disabled veterans who are in training under the Vocational Rehabilitation program (Public Law 16). Disabled veterans who are training under the PL plan are not required to submit these special wage reports.

All veterans in training under the GI Bill who began training prior to Aug. 8 are required to furnish VA with a report of their wages for August, September, and October. Most veterans who have entered training after that date have supplied VA with reports or estimates of their monthly earnings.

Veterans who have not reported may mail their statements to the Cincinnati Regional VA Office, 209 East Sixth street, Cincinnati 2, Ohio, or may call at any VA Office for assistance in filling their report. It was pointed out that all communications to VA should bear the full name of the trainee veteran, and his "C" number.

Dr. August explained that such information is necessary for his office to make necessary subsistence adjustments required by recent legislation which forbids VA to pay subsistence allowances to veterans who earn outside wages exceeding $175 (single per month) or $200 (with dependents). VA can supplement wages with subsistence allowances of varying amounts, but outside earnings plus subsistence cannot exceed the statutory limits. Maximum subsistence allowances remain unchanged at $65 (single) and $90 (with dependents) per month.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

An editor just last week denounced me for making "too many mistakes—even for a columnist." The election certainly was not one of them. As a matter of fact, I cannot find any mistake he is talking about. His excessively abusive personal attack was based on my belief that people should not be chased out of their homes to locate the UN at any certain spot, but that to do so would delay the peace organization from getting an early home because it would only start a long legal fight. The editor thought that was one of my "mistakes." If that was a mistake I am proud to bear it, because I wrote from the standpoint of the people, the human standpoint, against dispossession of people.

The only reason I mention it is because that is the same people's viewpoint from which I wrote the election prediction. Politicians please take notice.

Opinions expressed by the writer in this column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald.
